Dora Bruder

Dora Bruder was an only child of two Austrian Jews who had settled in Paris. They were not particularly prosperous but were able to sustain a life in the city. They sent Dora to a Catholic convent school, beginning in 1940 as the Germans were invading France, but she "left" after a year and a half as a student.

In Patrick Modiano's inquiry on Dora Bruder, photographic images—mostly portraits of Dora and her parents—play an important role. But in the original edition, these photographs are not reproduced, they are only described. We thus have to do with prose images, with an ekphrasis from existing photographs. In later editions—especially the American and Japanese translations—we find
